The humble ADDRESS of the House of Commons to the

Mis gracisus Sovereign,

E your majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the commons of Great-Britain in par iament atlembled, beg leave to re urn your maj sty our unfeigned thanks for your most gracious speech from the throne; and to congratulate your majesty on your fate and happy return to these king-

We acknowlege, with the utmost gratitude, your majelly's constant attendance to the good of your people; and beg leave to congratulate your majesty on the success of your endeavours for refloring peace to Europe, by the happy conclusion of a de Soitive treaty, in which all your allies have concurred without referve; and we cannot, on this occasion, but armire your majeffy's wisdom and conduct, by which you have, in so shore a space of time, reconciled and adjusted so many jairing inte reits, and complexied this great and necessary work.

Permit us, Sir, humbly to return your majesty our thanks for your tender regard to your fachful sebjects, in taking the first opportunity to reduce the public expences, which has been done with unufual dispatch; and we acknowlege equally your majefty's wisdom in recommending to us occonomy, and the improvement of the revenue, both absolutely necessary in our present circumstances; in order to lessen the national debt, ease your people, and strengthen ourselves against all suture events; and we affure your majefly, that we will omit nothing which may conduce to those important and salutary ends.

It gives the highest satisfaction to your saithful commons, that your majelly has been graciously pleased to take notice of the bravery of your forces by fea and land, an honour their behaviour has mon justly deserved; and we do affure your majefty, that all due attention shall be paid on our part, to the services of those gallant men; who have figualized themselves fo gloriously in defence of their country.

We are truly sensible of the importance of that figural success which has attended your majesty's arms at sea, through the course of the war, and are fully convinced how necessary it is to maintain our fleets in perfect strength and order, even in times of the most prosound peace. Your faithful commons beg leave humbly to affure your majefty, that they will grant fuch supplies as are necessary to secure effectually the peace and tranquility of your majesty's government, and to preserve the honour of the nation, by making good it's engagements; and that the chief objects of our consideration shall be, what your majesty has so graciously and wifely recommended to us, the improvement of our commerce, the supporting and strengthening of public credit, and the cultivation of the arts of peace; that your majesty may be enabled to gratify your royal inclinations, by making this nation a flourishing and happy people, under your auspicious government, and that of your royal family, to future generations.

His Majesty's most gracious ANSWER.
